WILL THE WAR RESTORE THE UNION
—IS IT A FAILURE?

The black-hearted traitors and the pale-hearted patriots who combined at Chicago to nominate McClellan and Pendleton, the men who always delayed the war, and the men who always opposed it, had styled the war a failure, and called for its abandonment. Few, if any, of those ex-cavars had ever participated in it personally.
None of them knew anything of what they announced as it was prompted to them in their own coverts, by either the basest motives or the meanest instincts. Precisely so did Judas account Christianity a failure. Precisely so did Benefit Arnold, in his letter which we printed on Monday, decide the Revolutionary War a failure. The evidence is as worthless as Isidorus's detectable.

There are men of better credit who can testify in this point. They are men who sprang to the combat at the very first call, and have led the old ring through the haze of a hundred battles.
They are the men of all others, who should best know the actual strength of the Rebellion, for they have been for three years in mortal grapple with it. They are the men, too, whose estimate of military skill and strategy—who day and night labor for the safety of their country—whose whole soul is given up to the welfare of their country—whose every drop of blood singly contains more of real manhood, more of those elements which spring from the living soul instead of the dead, than that all the heroes who gathered to do their duty in Cleopatra. What these heroes to the Copperhead declaration that the war is a failure, and cannot restore the Union Says Lieutenant-General Grant:

"The war is not far distant, if we will only be true to our trust. All we want now to insure an early restoration of the Union is a determined unity of sentiment North."

Says Major-General Hooker:

"This Union must be preserved, and there is no such thing as a Union of half-slaves and half-free men—the fighting the conception to death. This Rebellion is tottering while I speak; it is going down, and will soon tumble into ruin."

Says Major-General Meade:

"I am here to discuss, all questions as to the origin of the war, we have daily and hourly evidences that it exists, and that it can only be terminated by hard fighting, and by determined efforts to overcome the armed enemies of the Government."

Says Major-General Burnside:

"World is not be cowardly for us to say that this Rebellion cannot be crushed, and the authority of the Government sustained? There is in my mind no question of it. There can be no such hostilities until the entire authority of the Government is acknowledged by every citizen of our country."

Says Major-General Logan:

"The greatest victory of the Rebels, greater than any they can yet conceive, that can give them a particle of hope, will be to defeat the war party at the incoming campaign."

Says Major-General Dix:

"My desire is to do all in my power to sustain the Government in its efforts to subdue the Rebellion, and to be effectual in my judgment, by a steady and unwavering prosecution of the war."

Says the old veteran, Major-General Wool:

"Nothing, for aught that I can discover, will save the Union and its Government, but the successes of Grant, Sherman, Parrot, and Shadrian."

Probably there is not a single Major-General in the army, or even Brigadier-General, or sergeant, or even the lowest private, who does not believe that the rebellion is lost. It is lost, in the use of a "timy" and other tools the lock was torn out of the safe. The inside burglar had just completed a fine banking house into which he had put a safe.

It is not improbable that this is the same "gang" that robbed the safe of Messrs. Tufts & Jack, Chillicothe, Peoria county, about three weeks since, of $10,000. Theirs was a Duryea & Forsyth, with a steel plate chest inside, supposed to be a barger proof, with a master key. The thief, however, offered less resistance than the outside of the safe, as the lock was forced with apparently little effort.

The robbery was committed on Saturday night, and it was not reported until Sunday evening, the thief had a large sum of the dollars, which set about ferreting out the master immediately on its discovery. This seems to be a particularly unfortunate case, as Mr. Sanford
